ACKNOWLEDGMENT

From its beginning, Desegregation in Education has benefitted from the efficient work of many dedicated individuals. The tasks involved in producing this directory have often been tedious, yet each person associated with the project has cheerfully borne his or her share of the drudgery in the hope that the information we have collected will help those who pursue the goal of equal educational opportunity. The efforts of Dara Davidson, James Donathen, Richard Drucker, Barbara Gaal, John Mazza, Bruce Meagher, Aniela Murphy, Florencio Ramirez, Norma Silvers, Carl Stafford, Elizabeth Valentine, William Valentine, Lisa Yannucci, and Thomas Yannucci are gratefully acknowledged. Special thanks must go to Bruce Meagher and Bill Valentine whose contributions were vital.

INTRODUCTION

In the Winter of 1976, the Midwestern Regional Office of the United States Commission on Civil Rights contacted the Notre Dame Center for Civil Rights to inquire whether its staff maintained a listing of all school desegregation decisions or, if it did not, whether any other civil rights agencies or private organizations might have such a list. Our answer to both questions was no. That inquiry, however, led to the effort contained here to produce a directory of reported decisions involving desegregation in education.

Further contact with the Commission on Civil Rights and our own efforts to locate such a list of cases indicated that no very comprehensive list existed. Agencies concerned with school desegregation try to maintain records of the cases, investigations, or administrative proceedings of concern to them. Similarly, private organizations and individual attorneys try to maintain accurate dockets of their pending and past cases. Even in this effort, both public and private groups are often frustrated by the pressing demands of litigation and their limited resources. Furthermore, what listings these groups do maintain are not readily available to interested researchers or the public.

Desegregation in Education: A Directory of Reported Federal Decisions is a first step toward meeting the need for a more general listing and basic directory of desegregation (and related) cases. It has been produced with a limited staff and a limited budget and should not be viewed as an exhaustive list. Hopefully, however, the directory will serve as a foundation for those efforts analyzing more fully the school desegregation process.

A description of how the directory was compiled may assist its users and explain its limitations. First, as the title indicates, it is restricted to reported decisions of the United States District Courts, United States Courts of Appeal, and the Supreme Court of the United States. Decisions in which the court did not issue a written opinion have not been included. Thus the directory is not a substitute for existing legal research tools used to trace the complete procedural histories of cases.

The cases included in the directory were located by Center staff assistants who manually turned the pages of the surveyed volumes and quickly checked each reported decision to determine if it was in any way related to desegregation in education. Each decision located through this process was carefully analyzed by filling out a standardized form eliciting the information which ultimately is contained in the directory and compiled in its indexes. The completed forms were placed in alphabetical order and the data was converted to a machine readable format. The indexes were then generated by computer.

The Directory consists of two parts. The first is an alphabetical listing of the cases. Each case listing begins with an identifying number which is followed by the case name. The citation, deciding court, and the full date of decision follow. Identifying characteristics of the case, described more fully below, are included in each listing as in the geographical location of the school district or other educational agency involved in the case.

The indexes comprise the second part of the directory. Under each indexed item appears a listing of the number of each case in which that factor or characteristic has been identified. Case numbers are also listed by the state in which the litigation took place. The full title and citation for each case number listed in the indexes is obtained by reference to that number in part one of the directory.

For each listed case, the plaintiffs are identified according to their race as black, white, Mexican American, Puerto Rican and other Latino (excluding Mexican American), Native American, or Asian. Black plaintiffs clearly predominate. Researchers interested in other minorities, however, should find such classification useful. They can quickly locate cases involving each of these minorities by reference to the appropriate index. Additionally, we have noted those cases in which the United States government has been involved as a plaintiff or intervenor. A separate index lists those cases in which the United States or its agencies have been named as defendants.

The cases are broken down in terms of the type of school accused of discrimination. Public elementary and secondary schools are the defendants in most of the cases. We have created special lists of those cases involving private schools and post-secondary institutions. The index includes separate classifications for those cases where either state, county, or local agencies or officials other than local school districts have been named as party-defendants.

To further classify these decisions, two additional criteria have been employed. When busing was a significant issue in the litigation, the case has been designated as such. Similarly, if the case involved the segregatory assignment of teachers or staff, the demotion or dismissal of black teachers or staff in the desegregation process, or discrimination in the hiring or conditions of employment of teachers, the case has been labeled as involving "teachers" and indexed accordingly.

A few additional items of information may assist users of the directory. Many school desegregation decisions have involved consolidated appeals. In these instances we have attempted to list each case separately under its own name in the Directory. The slow evolution of the law of school desegregation and the reluctance of many school districts and some judges to comply with that law have produced many reported decisions of the same case. In these cases we have listed each reported decision separately and have tried to do so in chronological order. The location of the litigation has been included to facilitate research focusing on a particular state, county, or city.

The directory includes decisions reported in volumes 118 through 418 of the Federal Supplement, volumes 209 through 541 of the Federal Reporter 2d, and volumes 347 through 423 of the United States Reports. In addition, the most recent cases listed in the Supreme Court Reporter have been utilized. Thus the directory covers reported decisions of the period from just prior to the Supreme Court's 1954 decision in Brown v. Board of Education to the Fall of 1976.
